For The United States:

Space Prestige Soars After Successful Shots

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—United States prestige in the space exploration field has soared in the wake of four successful launchings in five weeks.

The string of successes began March 11 when Pioneer V, carrying the world's first interplanetary communications system, streaked into orbit about the sun.

Tiros I, the weather satellite which photographs cloud cover, was boosted aloft on April 1. Twelve days later, Tiros was followed into orbit by Transit I-B, man's first navigation satellite.

Discoverer XI was fired into orbit from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., Friday in another attempt to find a means of returning men and objects from space.

Space officials at the Cape view these accomplishments as marking the transition of the U.S. program from the pre-Sputnik and hastily conceived post-Sputnik projects into more solid efforts which will enable this nation to overtake the Soviet Union in the race for space.

Most feel the United States has succeeded in laying a broad, sound space program that soon will produce greater scientific, technical and economic rewards than the Soviet program. Some believe significant gains made by America in the space sciences already outstrip those made by the Soviets.

This confidence is in deep contrast to a bleak day in December 1957 when American prestige tumbled with the fiery explosion of the nation's first satellite rocket, the Vanguard.

This came shortly after the Soviet Union had startled the world by launching the first satellites, Sputnik I and II.

Six weeks after the Vanguard fiasco, the United States was in the race. On Jan. 31, 1958, Explorer I whirled into orbit from Cape Canaveral.

"A look at the figures is indicative of something. The Russians have launched no earth satellites since Sputnik II nearly two years ago. We have successfully orbited a total of 18, half of which are still up. All three of the Russian satellites have been dragged to their deaths in the earth's atmosphere," a scientist said.

"What the Russians have done so far seems hardly adequate for a well-rounded space exploration program."

"What strikes me," he continued, "is the amazing scope of the American program in contrast with the surprising lack of it in the Russian program. Our effort has been a broad one designed to produce useable scientific and military information. We are receiving data on space properties close to and far from earth. Before long, we hope to have workable networks of defense, navigation, communications and meteorological satellites."

De Gaulle's talks with President Eisenhower in the United States are expected to be the most significant of his visit.

The sleek Boeing 707 landed in near freezing weather. De Gaulle wore a dark double-breasted overcoat.

The Canadian and French leaders exchanged greetings after De Gaulle received the customary 21-gun salute and reviewed a guard of honor made up of 100 men from the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Diefenbaker told De Gaulle the bonds of Canadian-French friendship had been cemented by the blood of two world wars and added: "Your presence here again serves to emphasize the importance we both attach to the preservation and strengthening of those bonds."

De Gaulle's wife stood nearby during the brief airport ceremony. They were guests Monday night of Canadian Gov. Gen. George P. Vanier.

He will spend four days in Canada and a week in the United States before concluding his 17,000-mile trip with a visit to French Caribbean territories.

This is the first visit of the 69-year-old French leader to North America since 1945.

While the visit will be mostly social, diplomatic officials believe his talks with Canadian and U.S. leaders will constitute an important part of Western preparations for the May 16 summit conference.

De Gaulle will meet Prime Minister John Diefenbaker twice Tuesday for private conversations.

Also taking part in the talks will be Maurice Couve de Murville and Howard Green, the French and Canadian foreign ministers.

Canada, as an ardent supporter of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, has taken an active part in drafting Western strategy.

As a member of the Western disarmament team in Geneva talks, Canada has played a key role in arms negotiations—a major subject for summit discussions.

The most important diplomatic talks, however, are expected to take place after De Gaulle arrives in Washington Friday. He and President Eisenhower will begin their conversations Saturday at the President's Gettysburg farm. De Gaulle is expected to urge the U.S. administration to share atomic secrets with France.

Leadership Aids Schools-Conant

HARRISBURG (AP)—Good leadership is essential to a good school system. Dr. James B. Conant advised Gov. Lawrence's Committee on Education Monday.

Since American education is operated on a decentralized system, he added, some type of partnership between the state and local school board is the best system.

"I think you can have an effective state leadership without interfering with local autonomy," he commented.

On the local level, he said, it is necessary to have a good school board working with a good superintendent aided by a staff of good administrators recruiting good teachers.

The former Harvard University president and specialist on public schools was brought here to address the full committee in what amounted to a "pep rally" prior to the start next week of its survey of the problems facing public education—from kindergarten through college—in the Keystone State. The committee is to report to the 1961 Legislature.

Conant said he believes a "uniform assessment of property" with a "fixed tax rate on that property" statewide are the two essentials.

Pennsylvania several years ago passed a uniform county assessment law but has no statewide standard for either assessment or taxation.

He also said he favors elimination of small schools through consolidations into larger units, a program which the state has encouraged for 13 years.

Small schools—a graduating class of under 100 pupils by Conant's standard—usually can't afford to offer the courses he said are essential in modern education.

For the more able student, who has a college education as his goal, Conant recommended four years of English with particular emphasis on composition, three or four years of social studies, four years of mathematics and four years of one foreign language.

MR. PRESIDENT

by Patrick and Vinmont

JAMES MONROE

Born at Monroe's Creek, Virginia, April 28, 1758. He graduated from College of William and Mary in 1776. A soldier in the Revolutionary army, he was among those who rowed across the Delaware with Washington.

Unable to obtain a permanent command in the army, he turned to law and politics. At 24 he was a member of the Virginia legislature and for almost fifty years thereafter served in official positions—several times a member of the State legislature, a member of Continental Congress, United States Senate, Minister to France, Spain and England, twice governor of Virginia, Secretary of State and Secretary of War. As Minister to France, under Jefferson, he returned with the treaty for the purchase of Louisiana.

Inaugurated the fifth President of the United States, March 4, 1817. He was re-elected in 1820. During his administration, legislation of great constructive value was enacted: peace with England, 1817, acquisition of Florida by purchase from Spain, and the seal was set for all time against foreign interference on American soil by the famous "Monroe Doctrine" in 1823.

He retired to his farm at Oak Hill, Virginia. He died in New York City, July 4, 1831.

DANIEL D. TOMPKINS

Born in Fox Meadows, New York, 1774. He graduated from Columbia College in 1795 and two years later was admitted to the bar. At 29 he was a member of the State legislature; a year later, associate justice of the New York Supreme Court. As governor of New York, 1807-17, and at the same time, military commander of the Third District, he earned national recognition for his great courage, standing alone against the pro-British factions who were apathetic toward the War of 1812.

Elected Vice-President of the United States in 1816, and again in 1820, he served eight years. During his tenure, he was publicly embarrassed when he could not produce vouchers for all the money used for military defense that had passed through his hands when governor of New York. Although a judicial inquiry, which he asked for, determined he was not a defaulter, this unfortunate incident brought on a depressed state of mind and ill-health, and he was absent from the Senate much of the time. He died in 1825.

MRS. JAMES MONROE

Born in 1768, Elizabeth Kortright, a beautiful New York belle, was married, at eighteen, to James Monroe. Attending state functions in Europe with her ambassador husband, she was able to observe court etiquette. She won acclaim during the French Revolution for her courageous pleading that saved the life of Lafayette's wife. An accomplished hostess in the White House, Mrs. Monroe gave to the social functions a ceremonious elegance heretofore unknown. Not in robust health, she was assisted by her daughters, Eliza and Maria, the latter becoming the first daughter of a President married in the White House. Mrs. Monroe died in 1830.

Survey Enlightening

Monroe Water Sources Vital Asset

(Editor's note: This is the second of two articles reviewing findings of a recent economic survey of Monroe County.)

By Don Allen

"MONROE County lies in a region in which ground-water yield is generally considered to be quite good. The clarity and cool temperature of most ground-water supplies make this resource one of the most important in planning for and maintaining certain industries."

In those words, the Bureau of Business Research of the college of business administration at the Pennsylvania State University summarized the county's water resources in its recently released economic survey of the county.

In addition to its words of praise for the quality of local water, the report points out that the county is fortunate in that its streams and lakes do not drain the nearby anthracite coal fields and there is no major pollution problem as there are no large cities in the county.

It reviews briefly the flood control program now under way as the result of damage resulting from the 1955 flood which accompanied Hurricane Diane's visit to the county.

Poultry and dairy products are the principal types of farming conducted in the county, which ranks 55th in value of cash income from agricultural products among the 67 counties in the state, based on 1958 figures.

Limits Agriculture

The report points out that the mountainous and heavily wooded character of the county's topography limits its agricultural development.

The survey lists three principal categories of manufacturing concerns in the county, based upon the value of production. They are metals and metal products, textiles and textile products and paper and printing.

"New industries moving into Monroe County will find good variety in the many supporting industries available to them," the report adds.

Pointing out that the county does not have an industrial park as such, the survey says an area of about 40 acres in Stroud Township is available for industrial use.

The report also praises the quality of electric, gas and telephone service provided here.

Terming the Poconos the state's "major recreation region," the survey says Monroe County is the "earliest and best developed section of the Poconos."

It points to the wide variety of accommodations among the approximately 500 resort establishments and says the area owes its importance as a recreational center not only to its "picturesque" terrain but to its proximity and accessibility to centers of urban population—notably New York City and Philadelphia.

"Should present highway plans become a reality, both New York City and the cities in western Pennsylvania and Ohio should become even more readily accessible to the area," it says.

The survey reports that the county has "an exceptionally high per capita retail sales volume because of its heavy resort trade."

Much of the retail trade activity is centered in the Stroudsburgs, although outlying areas of the county are beginning to grow.

A table of sales volume for Monroe County and its communities compared with neighboring counties and their communities shows that Monroe County shared with Luzerne County the greatest growth in sales volume and that the out-

MEDICINE CHEST

"LEFTOVERS"

There's but one good place in the home for "leftovers." That's the refrigerator—and the "leftovers" should be foods, not medicines.

Medicine chest "leftovers" are risky at best, and often downright dangerous. The medicine your physician prescribed a year or so ago was intended to be used then, not now. Avoid serious danger—dump old medicine at once.

Each illness requires scientific diagnosis—and, usually, specialized medicine is indicated. See your physician. Let him decide what's best. Call on us to provide your medication.

Tocks Island's State

Editor's Note — This is the third in a series of articles on the Delaware River Study recently completed by the Army's Corps of Engineers.

By Bob Stewart

THE Tocks Island Dam project has been in a state of flux ever since the State's Dept. of Forests and Waters began, sometime ago, buying various properties near Bushkill, then shifted gears and stopped such buying.

This much is definite in the way of planning for the dam: It will be located at Tocks Island, about nine and one-half miles below Waupac Bend.

Cost of the earth-filled dam, largest proposed for construction on the Delaware River, is estimated at $93,000,000.

The dam will back water up the river for a distance of 30 miles, and will extend the water eight miles across at its widest point.

404 Feet Above

Plans call for the relocation of Bushkill, on the Pennsylvania side, and Flatbrookville, on the New Jersey side of the river.

Height of the water above sea level at the dam breast will be 404 feet, and at flood stage the water will reach 423 feet above sea level.

The dam will be the only one along the river constructed for four purposes — flood control, recreation, water supply and power.

The target date for its being finished has been set for 1975 — based upon the need of the dam as proved by the completed study.

The Division office of the Corps Philadelphia District will review the plans, then the Washington office of the Engineers will also review the plans.

Following this, the governors of the various states involved will review the project and after all this review, it will be sent to Congress for the appropriation of the funds.

It is estimated that five to ten years will be needed for the reviews and the acquisition of the money.

When and if the money is appropriated — and only then —

Political Leaders Claim Neutrality On Track Issue

HARRISBURG (AP) — Pennsylvania's political party chairmen Monday insisted their organizations are neutral on the question of legalizing parimutuel harness racing betting in the state.

Voters in 14 counties will decide in special referenda at the April 26 primary whether to allow harness races with betting in their areas.

"The Democratic party has made no organized effort either for or against this referendum," said State Chairman John S. Rice. "We feel this is a matter to be decided by the individual without political interference."

GOP State Chairman George I. Bloom said about the same thing. But he added Gov. Lawrence and Pittsburgh Mayor Joseph M. Barr, in announcing they will vote 'yes'

Anti-Wager Unit Parley Set Tonight

THE CITIZENS' Committee to defeat Racetrack Gambling in Monroe County has scheduled the third in a series of public meetings for tonight at 7:30 at the Stroudsburg YMCA.

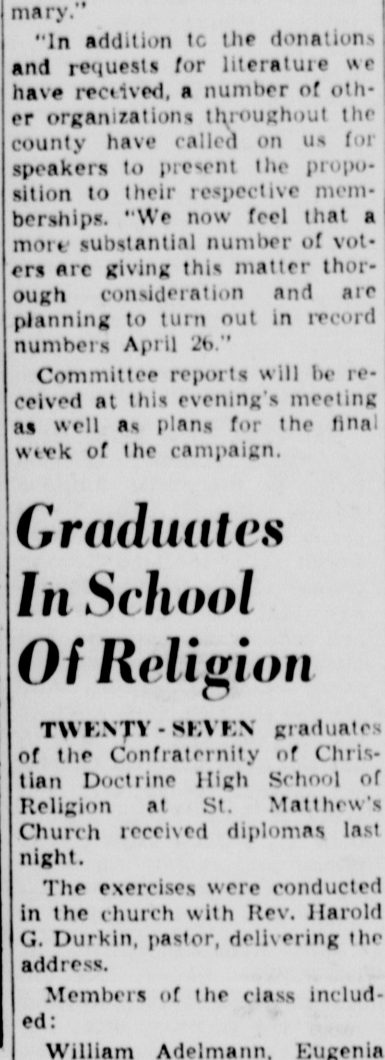

Organized to defeat the race-track proposition scheduled for balloting in the primary election, April 26, the bi-partisan group has been carrying on a public information campaign via the press and mails.

"We are encouraged by the response to our efforts to date," a spokesman for the organization stated. "From the outset we have been concerned that a great number of voters in Monroe County were unaware that their only opportunity to consider this proposition was on the primary ballot of April 26."

"Our group feels that this matter is much too important to be decided by the less than 30% of the electorate that normally turns out for the primary."

"In addition to the donations and requests for literature we have received, a number of other organizations throughout the county have called on us for speakers to present the proposition to their respective memberships. "We now feel that a more substantial number of voters are giving this matter thorough consideration and are planning to turn out in record numbers April 26."

Committee reports will be received at this evening's meeting as well as plans for the final week of the campaign.

Pocono Shrine Honors Bender

ONE OF THE oldest living members of Irem Temple Shrine at Wilkes-Barre was tendered a testimonial dinner last night by the Pocono Shrine Club.

Norman O. Bender, of Stroudsburg, was guest of honor at the affair celebrating his 50th anniversary as a member of the Shrine. He joined April 20, 1910 when Irem Temple was only 15 years old.

Some 60 Shriners and other Masons attended the dinner, held at Merry Hill Lodge in Paradise Valley. Among those who turned out to pay tribute to the veteran member were H. Monroe Houtz, illustrious potentate of Irem Temple, and three members of his divan, Chief Rabbi Thomas E. Lehman, High Priest George Smith, and Oriental Guide Hopkin T. Rowlands.

Ralph W. Barnes, president of the Pocono Shrine Club, introduced the toastmaster, M. S. Baldwin, first president of the club, who in turn presented four of Bender's associates who spoke on various phases of the honored guest's career.

Role As Citizen

Judge Fred W. Davis centered his remarks on Bender's role as a citizen who had shown a great interest in his fellow man through his unselfish deeds over the years.

Mountainhome Man Commits Suicide

MOUNTAINHOME — Joe Whitley Swaine, 59, a roomer at the Vogt Tourist Home, Mountainhome, blew the top of his head off yesterday just before supper.

Swaine, who roomed at the tourist home for the past four years, was alone in a room he shared with Charles W. King, who found the body. Swaine had cradled the 16 gauge shotgun between his legs and pulled the trigger.

Suzanne M. Vogt, daughter of Wilmer Vogt, owner of the tourist home, was cleaning a room four doors away from Swaine's room at 5:45 p.m. when she heard the shot.

She said she kept working and went back to the tavern about 15 minutes later.

King, who had earlier gone to the room to wash up for supper and returned to the tavern, asked if Swaine had come to the tavern for supper and was told he had not.

King then asked one of the employees, who was leaving, if he would call Swaine, but again seeing no sign of Swaine decided to go to the room himself.

He found Swaine slumped across the bed, he said, and shook him to see if he was sleeping.

It was then, King said, that he noticed the blood and marks of the shotgun in the room.

He immediately returned to the tavern and asked Vogt to call the police, saying Swaine had "committed suicide."

Despondent

King reported to a Daily Record reporter that Swaine had appeared despondent at times, but the night he took his life he seemed in fairly good spirits.

Cpl. Joseph DiPietro and Trooper John Kinsella who are investigating the shooting, are checking into the possibility that Swaine fired a shot which missed, then took a second shot which killed him.

It was reported that Swaine had been divorced from his wife in 1946, but authorities discounted this as being any reason for the suicide.

Coroner Daniel G. Warner issued a certificate of death by suicide following the examination of the situation.

Resident All Of Life

Born in Mountainhome, he was the son of the late Joe Whitley and Iva Price Swaine, and was a resident of that community all his life.

He was a painter and decorator by occupation.

Sad Day For Smokers

Ever since they were introduced to it in the time of Elizabeth I, the British have been fond of tobacco. The fact has not escaped the attention of the tax-gatherers, and now in the time of Elizabeth II, the excise is being increased so that the popular brands of cigarettes will cost a fraction over 57 cents a pack. To an American who has tried any of the popular brands of British cigarettes, this sounds considerably worse than highway robbery.

We note with interest the following paragraph from The New York Times account of the new budget (containing the tobacco tax increases) as presented to Parliament last week by Derick Heathcoat Armory, Chancellor of the Eschequer:

"Sipping occasionally from a glass of lemonade laced with gin, the Chancellor spoke for slightly more than an hour and a half. Last year this (budget) speech lasted more than two hours and at its conclusion he showed definite signs of strain. But then he was sipping only milk and honey."

It was a sad day for the British cigarette smoker when Mr. Heathcoat Armory discovered that a Tom Collins emboldened a man definitely more than a glass of milk and honey. A versifier hostile to tobacco noted long ago that "it mars a man, it mars a purse." The Chancellor has given a new emphasis to this truth, as well as to the merciful merits of milk and honey.

The Sinatra Story

The box office continues to speak volubly in the motion picture business, which is the manufacture of pictures for sale as an amusement. Its objective is large income for those who engage in the business and for the companies that undertake these manufactures and the banks that underwrite them. Actors, producers, directors, writers take refuge in the word, Art, is an alibi for licentiousness, wickedness, drunkenness, and even Communism. But there is no particular Art involved in this business, except that rarely such a producer as D. W. Griffith or Cecil B. de Mille rises above the box office and becomes a poet in his own right. Few Hollywood writers have any right to call their synthetic copy, written and re-written, worked over by many hands, finally kneaded into the dough of productivity by such a master of the business as the late Louis B. Mayer, Art.

Frank Sinatra went into the singing business after a short and unsuccessful spell as a fighter on the New Jersey coast. He had some talent which a press agent worked up into a brilliant public response. Adolescents either squealed or swooned at the right moment. However, such responses become contagious and Sinatra became a success. I once heard him sing like a real baritone and it was not bad at all, although neither his voice nor his pitch would have made a Metropolitan Opera audition.

Frank Sinatra lived those early years in the peace of a frightened young man. He earned a large fortune. He was married to a fine woman, Nancy, whom everyone respected and they had a family.

Suddenly, Sinatra became a big shot, a great figure, mentioned in all the peep-hole columns, often most unfavorably but the name was always spelled correctly. He began to chase dames and punch newspapermen for poaching on him. In due course, his family was broken up and he chased Ava Gardner around the world in the most advanced press agency. His wife, Nancy Sinatra, never remarried but Frankie the Tycoon and Ava Gardner kissed in public, quarreled in public, divorced in public and made a spectacle of themselves in public.

Then Frank decided that he would do no more of his funny singing, that he would become a serious actor and surprisingly, he did remarkably well. At any rate, he appeared in a number of motion pictures and television shows. No longer wed to anyone, Sinatra dated, as they call it, a number of women, most of whom were duly reported in the peep-hole columns. How would the peep-holders know about it if no one told them?

So Frank Sinatra decided to become a big businessman and set out to make a picture which he would himself own, produce, control and profit by. Did he pick a noble or a jovial theme? Not he. He picked the story of an army deserter in war-time, one who was caught deserting and duly treated as a coward by his comrades.

But for Frank Sinatra, this Markin Time Whatever may be done or said. This fact you're sure to find, if you do not plan far ahead, Some day you will be far ahead, Some day you will be far behind.

By Luther Markin

With Walter Winchell On Broadway

Man About Town
Desert Inn Chief Wilbur Clark (and his lovely Toni) went through that "Bit" of breathlessness after a scare that the jet might crash-land at Int'l Airport.

"Do you know," said Wilbur later, "I wasn't afraid to die. I just got queasy in my middle" . . . Hank Henry's Silver Slipper show is the funniest in town . . . Prof Backwards (after a hilarious run at The Desert Inn) emceed the Sullivan Show on the 26th. His new and old jokes get a laugh per second . . . We recently reported that the swiftest show (in show biz) was the Louis Prima-Keely Smith fun-fest. Well we just caught the Betty Grable-Dick Shawn (at El Rancho) show and Pearl Mae Bailey's at The Flamingo so Louie and Keely will kindly move over . . . Harry James' orchestra is still rocking them. He resumes in the jam-packed Flamingo Lounge in a few nights . . . The most novel entertainment is "Holiday in Japan" at The New Frontier. Big Bargain for The Latin Q on B'way and other night club stages that could accommodate the large and talented cast.

The Copa (New York) signed "Miss Hawaii" (elected twice to the "Miss America Beauty Contest") whose Vegas act is so refreshing . . . Frick Podel (over the long-distance phone) signed Del-Fin Thursday (that's correct, Mr. Printer), who is 19, beautiful and talented, to appear at The Copa sometime between July 7th and the Fall. She's a whole line of show-girls by herself, but the Copa dolls (in Hawaiian sarongs behind her) will make it New York's girliest show . . . At'n Copa Chief: Would suggest July 7th booking since Hawaii officially becomes 50th State July 5th.

Sally Rand, co-starring at The Silver Slipper, has the best act of her career. Remind us to tell you lady what Dr. Dafee (who saved the famed Quintuplets) muttered about Sally at The Old Paradise on B'way . . . Sally's line about the secret of her long-time fan-dance success: "The Rand is quicker than the eye" . . . Phil Harris makes his Vegas debut as a star (Desert Inn) tomorrow eve. The Crosby Boys (with a new fast act co-star . . . Phil Duke's song styling (at Hank Henry's) got this compliment from a pro: "She has a lot of Keely Smith in her throat." La Duke opened at The Nevada Club on the 27th . . . Big Hit Dick Shawn's get-away line at El Rancho: "The next act . . . Miss Grable is better" . . . New Frontier stars Della Reese, whose song-belt is packing them in. The Treniers keep the excitement jumping for another hour. This show includes two acts new to these orbs: The Fabulous Millionaires (very amusing musicians) and Mary Layne and Fred Kusion plus the Peter Hank duo . . . Both acts would delight New York's Copa Loungers and any other intimate spot . . . La Layne's Impression of Roberta Sherwood fractured one and all . . . In short, The New Frontier Lounge show has too much talent.

Broadway Stay-Up-Lates who recall darning Joy Skylar (in the Latin Quarter line) will be interested in what she's doing these days besides being a housewife and mudda. Joy is also an auxiliary nurse at a Vegas hospital . . . We asked a fellow to identify a certain playboy spender. "What's he do?" we inquired. "He's in the wealthy father business." Was the chuckle . . . Victor Borge is standing them up (Wotat? . . . The Sahara . . . The Stardust, Tropiana and Dunes girl-shows should be titled "The Unbelievables," considering they wear unmentionables . . . Bobby Van is a high spot in Betty Grable's zinky act . . . After several 24-hour-a-day-around-the-Hollywood-and-Vegas clock, we finally slept ten hours without taking a pill, drink or anything . . . "I just found out," we told anyone in sight, "how one gets some sleep in Las Vegas" . . . "What's the trick?" they asked. . . "You just go," we Baby-Stared, "to bed."

Birthday Patty Vignette: Former newspaper publisher, newspaper-radio station-tv owner, and buyer and seller of newspapers from coast-to-coast, Albert Zugsmith is now one of Hollywood's prosperous movie producers and directors . . . At our birthday celebration in Hollywood's Kowloon the other very happy evening, Mr. Zugsmith was among the guests . . . They included our favorite people (members of the newspaper and show business world): Columnists and staffers from the Los Angeles newspapers, the Associated Press and several H'wood showfolk .

Interpreting The News

Temporary Ban?

By J. M. Roberts
Associated Press News Analyst
The United States and Britain have been operating for a year and half under a temporary nuclear testing ban covering the very same ground on which they are unable to reach permanent agreement with the Soviet Union at Geneva.

The temporary agreement can now be abrogated at will, since it's original limit was one year. The United States has announced she is keeping it in effect only on a contingent basis, and has laid plans for at least one more test unless a treaty is arrived at soon.

The temporary ban prohibits the small underground explosions which the West insists cannot now be covered by treaty because there is no adequate means of checking against violations. Against this background the joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy is holding this week the first big debate in two years on the effects of an A-testing ban.

The committee, the Pentagon and the Atomic Energy commission are all doubtful to the point of some very fervent opposition—about the effect of such a ban on the national security.

The conflict is between the need for further developing atomic program and the political pressure produced, with the aid of Communist propaganda, by international fear of fallout.

The public itself has had small means of judging between the two sides.

There is little or no information available on what problems of atomic development have arisen because of the temporary ban, which might offer a considerable guide for the future.

Scientific proponents and opponents of a test ban will give their views at this week's hearing. So far as the public is concerned, these things frequently boil down to expressions of opinion which cannot be adjudicated because so much of the basic evidence is classified.

Nevertheless the debate may throw a little light on the conflict between the administration and its scientific and military advisers.

The Allen-Scott Report

Russian Surveys

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington, April 19 — A Russian oceanographic ship, four times larger than any the U.S. has, is conducting extensive surveys of a "definite military significance" off the Atlantic coast.

In recent weeks this Soviet research vessel has been operating from Cape Hatteras, N.C., to New England. Naval authorities consider the information being collected by the Russians as particularly important for submarines armed with nuclear-headed ballistic missiles that could destroy major centers on the East coast.

The Navy and Coast Guard are keeping the Soviet ship under scrutiny. This is all that can be done, as it has carefully stayed beyond the three-mile limit.

Equipped with the latest deep sea probing and sounding devices, the MICHAEL LOMANOV is one of the largest and finest of its kind in the world. Its more than 65 scientists and technicians, some of them women, are working around the clock surveying this strategic Atlantic bottom and the Gulf Stream.

Dr. Roger Revelle, director of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, Calif., disclosed these disturbing Russian operations at a private meeting of the House Appropriations Committee.

An immediate expansion of U.S. oceanographic research is urgent, he warned, as the Soviet is outstripping us in this increasingly vital field.

"For us not to do that," said the noted scientist, "would be foolhardy. The seas are becoming more and more important in every respect; militarily, as sources of food and many other essentials. We have neglected this crucial sphere all too long, and should waste no further time greatly increasing our efforts to learn more about it."

Representative Sidney Yates (D., Ill.), asked about the "military significance" of the MICHAEL LOMANOV's surveys in the Atlantic. Publishable highlights of this closed-door discussion are as follows:

"There is no question these operations have important military significance," replied Dr. Revelle. "The Russians are obviously thinking in terms of functioning in these waters, and they are learning everything they can about them."

"What do they seem to be chiefly interested in?" said Yates.

"They are primarily studying the Gulf Stream," explained Dr. Revelle. "We are also pretty certain they are surveying the contours of the ocean floor. The more they know about the Atlantic in this strategic area, the better they would be able to operate submarines there."

"Are we doing anything like that off the Russian coast?" continued Yates.

"We do the best we can," declared Revelle. "But we are seriously handicapped. We don't have ships big enough for this job. That's why it is so urgent we should get busy and provide these vessels and necessary equipment."

"Is the size of a ship an important factor in the amount and quality of research that can be done?" asked Yates.

"Very definitely," replied Revelle. "The MICHAEL LOMANOV is a concrete example of that. It is four times larger than anything we have, and just about that much better."

"Have any of our people been on this ship?"

"Not during these operations," was the answer.

Dust Storms — The Central Intelligence Agency has solved one mystery in a batch of pictures produced by our TIROS I weather-eye satellite.

These photos showed curious dark cloud formations over a large area in southern Russia. Scientists of the National Space Administration and the Weather Bureau were puzzled — until the CIA supplied the answer.

The black clouds were dust storms sweeping over the southern Ukraine.

According to CIA, the northern Caucasus had a severe drought last fall and winter. In the Krasnodar region, great dust storms turned day into night. These storms have pushed into the southern Ukraine, which also has had far below normal precipitation.

As a result, both these vast plain areas have had dust storms very similar to those that afflicted our Middle West several decades ago.

Moscow has said nothing about this serious situation. But TIROS I uncovered it in these photos as it soared over this area. The CIA filled in the details, which the Kremlin is finally beginning to admit.

An article in Izvestia, official organ of the Soviet government, discloses that dust storms "blotted out the sun" from March 19 to March 23 in the Krasnodar area. The paper also stressed that the extensive drought is certain to reduce this year's grain yield.

Flashes — Premier Khrushchev wants to visit Greece on his way home from the Big Four summit conference next month. The Greek government has been sounded out on that by Ambassador Mikhail Sergeyev. So far nothing has been done about an invitation to Khrushchev pending inquiries on the matter to the other NATO countries. . . . Ghana's Prime Minister Nkrumah will offer a "declaration of human rights and principles" at the Conference of Commonwealth Ministers in London. This move will touch off an explosion with South Africa attending the meeting. But Nkrumah is making no bones of his strong opposition to South Africa's apartheid policies, and says he has the backing of Prime Minister Nehru in offering the explosive resolution.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:

Against Racetrack

Mr. John Hill, Editor
The Daily Record
Stroudsburg, Pa.
Dear Mr. Hill:

Some people act as if Monroe County is going straight to hell if a race track opens here. Others claim it would be manna from heaven that would lower taxes and bring benefits to every citizen.

Most Monroe Countians couldn't care less about the whole business, and it's these careless people who are really going to wreck our county, state and country.

Every important issue is controversial and has at least two sides. But whether it's the Children's Aid Society, Community Planning and Zoning, Juvenile Delinquency, overcrowded School Buses, or Race Track Gambling, the most common heard expression is, "It makes no difference what you say or do. They are going to have it their way."

Well that's a lot of baloney, and we have Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini, and King George III to prove it. A lot of people thought "they" couldn't be stopped either, but thank God, there were others willing to speak up and fight for what they honestly believed.

Now, a Racetrack in Monroe County is not going to change things overnight, but there are predictable consequences: an increase in off-track bookies; the Numbers Racket which is based on the Pari-Mutuel results; an increase in underworld population to operate these illegal enterprises; and political pay-offs for "protection" which they never fail to find. (After all, if it becomes legal to bet at the track, why shouldn't the people be able to place a bet anywhere, anytime, runs their argument.)

This pattern of "development" of a territory has been so successful for our new generation of "respectable" gangsters that we can count on it happening here, over a period of time, following the opening of a legal track.

If—and it's a big if—Monroe Countians want this, they can again shrug their shoulders and say, "There's nothing you can do."

But—if you don't want it, there certainly is something you can do: Go to the polls April 26th and vote "No" on this issue.

Every registered voter can vote on April 26th. You don't have to be registered as a member of any party.

Just Between Us

—By Bobby Westbrook

It wasn't the sun that awakened me at 6 a.m. yesterday morning. I figured out later that it must have been the sound of the forsythia bush bursting into bloom. Last time I looked, the buds were barely showing.

Must have been quite a sight to see—all of the blossoms bursting out at once—or maybe they did it in tandem like those strings of tiny firecrackers we used to have.

It was good growing weather, that's for sure. Good tanning weather down South, too, to judge by the tan that Curt Prins brought home from his vacation.

Although even that didn't make the office glow like the red trousers which Jim Shafer judged fit to wear for working on a Sunday afternoon. Looked like a sunset at his end of the office.

And it looks like a hurricane at home. Between the four term papers which Pete is working on simultaneously and which can't be disturbed and the ravellings, threads, and bits of cloth which resulted from Nancy shortening her whole summer wardrobe, the living room looks like the entry way of a store after a windy night.

But everybody looked sort of stubbly yesterday. The fresh Easter hair-dos were blown into tangles; those who tried to get another day's mileage out of their Easter corsages found the petals blowing off.

The small children were feeling queasy from too much chocolate, and the cellophane grass was sticking to the bottom of the chocolate eggs where they'd been nibbled on.

About time we get back to our routine, I'm afraid.

No Noble Grands
The Past Noble Grands Club of Rachel Broadhead Rebekah Lodge has cancelled its meeting for this week because of other lodge activities.

WYCKOFF'S is the store that has EVERYTHING!—including a few items we can't be too explicit about because we're not sure ourselves what they are. One of these is a jade-colored whatzis that came, I presume, from India or Japan, since it first appeared in our gift department along with other articles from those far-away places.

The whatzis is about seven inches tall . . . of shiny green pottery . . . and is all-in-one with its graceful pedestal. It has a spout . . . it has a handle . . . and it has an ornate design in the very same shade of green. It even has the appearance of having a lid—but it doesn't! The circular top is just an embossed motif. Another thing it has is holes . . . right spunk in the bottom. It's the gosh darnest thing I've ever seen.

When Marion Leedom first pointed it out to me, I said, "Oh . . . what a beautiful teapot!" But it obviously isn't. (Unless one would painstakingly "feed" tea leaves down the narrow spout, and be content to drink tea year after year without ever washing the pot—for it would be impossible to clean this strange figment of someone's imagination.)

"I bet this is for incense," I finally decided. I'm not sure how one would put the incense in, unless it were liquid . . . or what one would do after it was in. (Unless, of course, the pot is to be set on a brazier and allowed to steam.)

This thing has had me stumped for weeks. "Maybe it's for opium," I suggested. "Maybe you drop in the opium . . . place this on a brazier . . . Lie down on a silken couch with the spout a few inches below your nostrils, and dream."

"You've been reading too many Arabian Nights stories," my friends jeered. So now I'm beginning all over again. WHAT would you do with a gadget that doesn't open . . . can't be cleaned inside . . . and has holes at the bottom but not at the top?

Friday afternoon it was rather slow in the advertising department, so I hurried down to the gift department. "I'd like to borrow the whatzis," I said to Miss Leedom, and shrugging she said, "Well, I'm glad someone wants it for something."

"I might even buy this sometime," I told her, "and give it to my worst enemy."

"What for?" she asked

"To drive her crazy, naturally," I answered. "This thing could give anybody a terrific case of shingles from nervous tension." Then, as I passed Edna Brockman, head of our Wyckoff Travel Bureau, I waved my treasure and said, "Edna . . . in any of your travels have you ever come across anything like this?"

She laughed. "Never," she said. "And I wouldn't know what to do with it if I did."

Of course, I mused, ANYTHING can happen at Wyckoff's. Part of our store's charm is that things are rarely dull long. In the employees' kitchen I poured water down the spout, filling the "pot to the brim. At least I knew now that the whatzis has a false bottom. "Maybe it IS for incense," I mused. But it would take forever and a day to heat anything in the pot, wouldn't it, when you must first get the heat up through a pedestal of solid pottery?

Frankly, I give up. I'm only hoping some of you intelligent people . . . or widely traveled, well read individuals, will be able to enlighten me. In the meantime, we have a whatzis. This is not too surprising in a store that also has a denture in its Lost and Found Department, left by some lady who apparently dropped it while settling her account. We will return the lady's denture (an expensive one) upon claim. As for the whatzis . . . anyone who wishes can have that too. For only 5.98.

Snead Has Stopped Using Tin Cans

GREENSBORO, N. C. — Sam Snead, who is jokingly accused of burying his golf winnings in his back yard in tin cans, has stopped using tin cans.

"I've switched to plastic containers," Sam said, as he accepted $2,800 for winning the Greater Greensboro Open, "because geiger counters make it too easy for someone else to find the cans."

The 8,000 people who jammed the 18th green to watch Snead collect the top paycheck in the largest golf tournament in North Carolina for the seventh time, roared and then the clamor pulled the string.

"This course is in miserable shape," he began, "and unless Mr. Franklin (Ben Franklin, owner of the course) digs up one of his cans and spends some money, there won't be any of the top pros here next year."

Snead's salvo capped one of the stormiest tournaments in the annals of the Professional Golfer's Assn.

Snows Responsible For Turf Damage

Excessive and unexpected snows left the sprawling Star-mountain Forest Country Club in less than perfect shape. The greens on the front side were rough and in many places bare and any putt over three feet was strictly guess work. The fairways came through the snow in equally as bad shape.

The pros began complaining on Wednesday, after they had completed practice rounds.

"If the course is like this next year," said Mike Souchak, from nearby Durham, "I'm not coming back, I don't want to go out there and make a jackass out of myself."

Charles Leider, a circuit rookie from San Mateo, Cal., was moaning about the greens during the second round.

"I've played in quite a few golf tournaments, he said, "but these are the worst greens I've ever seen."

Six-Over Par Without Leaving The Fairway

Leider was six-over-par after five holes and had never been off the fairway.

The young Californian almost had to eat these condemning words after he played the backside.

He birdied six of nine holes, the most birds in one nine that have been scored in PGA Tournament play this year.

But the storm really broke on Saturday morning, the next to last day of the 72-hole event.

A Winston-Salem sports writer penned a column supposedly stemming from an interview with former U. S. Open winner, Julius Boros.

Boros was quoted in the column as saying, "Sam Snead is running this tournament, because he is being paid under the table appearance money."

Boros supposedly added, "the other big name pros shun the tournament because they feel they should receive appearance money if Snead is getting paid."

No Under The Table Money Allowed

PGA rules prohibit payment of appearance money except under the IT plan, a form of appearance money based on the previous year's tour performance. Snead was not eligible for appearance money in the GGO under the IT plan.

Boros denied that he had made the statements and that he had ever talked to the reporter. It was learned that the columnist obtained his material while over-hearing a conversation between Boros and two of his friends.

Boros forgot the incident but Tony Lema, another touring pro, who was quoted in another of the Winston-Salem writer's columns as having blasted the course condition, was not in a forgiving and forget mood.

Lema, an ex-Marine stormed into the press room and demanded to know where the writer had obtained his material. Lema claimed he had never talked with the Winston-Salem writer.

"I copied your remarks from a Durham paper," the reporter answered.

"But I've never talked to anyone from Durham Lema protested."

Lema Felt Writers Should Use Golf Clubs

Lema started to leave the room but wheeled around exploded, "They ought to give you guys clubs and let you go out and play and let us write about it."

An hour later, PGA Tournament Supervisor, Harvey Raynor said he was notifying his office that the PGA press badge of the Winston-Salem writer was being taken away.

Raynor later changed his mind, realizing that it would have been the first time in the history of the PGA that such action had been taken.

The size of the purse, $17,500 was also criticized by some of the pros but the sponsoring Greensboro Junior Chamber of Commerce had a remedy for the money troubles.

They upped the money to $20,000 shortly before starting time on Sunday. It was the first time that a tournament had increased its purse once the affair started.

Leonard Wants Added Conveniences

It was Stan Leonard, the friendly Canadian, that helped bring the tournament back to a lighter vein.

After signing his card on the final day and posting a 73, Leonard, who had never knocked anything connected with golf in his career as a pro, turned to the gallery.

"There's one thing this tournament needs, in fact one thing all tournaments need." As the crowd braced for another slam at the GGO, Leonard smiled and continued.

"There ought to be a gas chamber near the 18th-green for guys like me that have a bad round."

Williams Blasts Long Homer

Pascual KO's 15 As Nats Bop Sox 10-1 In Opener

WASHINGTON (AP) — Camilo Pascual struck out 15 or a club record and his hit-happy Washington teammates smashed four home runs Monday in a 10-1 rout of the Boston Red Sox. President Eisenhower and a packed opening-day crowd watched at Griffith Stadium.

Pascual, the brilliant Cuban right-hander, gave up only three hits in the most dazzling first-day performance in the capital in years.

Even one of the hits he allowed was a spectacle. Ted Williams landed on a 3-2 pitch in the second inning and blasted the ball over the fence in deep center. The home run went over the 31-foot wall 420 feet from the plate. It was the longest hit out of the park since Mickey Mantle of the Yankees belted two over the same spot on opening day in 1956.

Jim Lemon, Bob Allison, newcomer Earl Batley and Billy Conzolo laced homers for the Senators.

They and Pascual gave Eisenhower a relished going away present. The Chief Executive flew up from his golfing vacation at Augusta, Ga., to throw out the first ball for his last opening day game.

He now sports a winning 4-3 record, as far as the Senators are concerned, for season-starting pitches since he assumed office. Immediately after the game, he left for Augusta.

Video Keeps Palmer From New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Masters champion Arnold Palmer said Monday he would be unable to compete in the $27,000 Greater New Orleans Open Golf Tournament starting Thursday.

Palmer telephoned tournament officials from his home in Ligonier, Pa., that television commitments made it impossible for him to rejoin the touring pros.

Palmer is the year's top money winner with something like $16,000. He won the Masters two weeks ago by scoring birdies on the last two holes to nip Ken Venturi by one stroke. It was Palmer's second triumph in the Masters.

A Better Lawn For You People

By Bob Stauffer
Asst. County Agent

MOST OF THE homes in our area have a lawn. But just how good is your lawn? Could it be improved?

A dark green turf would enhance the beauty of many homes. In fact, a good home lawn is the first step toward a nicely landscaped home.

Although most people neglect a lawn, proper care is not too complicated. Lime is probably the most important single factor in maintaining a good lawn. Of course, proper fertilization cannot be overlooked. The right mower, at the proper cutting height, is also of great importance, and be sure not to overlook weed control. Actually, a combination of these and other factors contribute to the thick green carpet that we seek for outside our home.

But is it complicated? Will it take too much work? Actually lawn care is not complicated, but it will require some work.

First and very important is liming. Lime corrects soil acidity, makes fertilizer more available to plants and gives better aeration. It makes the concentration of toxic materials in the soil low and increases the activity of soil microbes. Microbes are the little organisms which decompose organic matter.

How much lime does your lawn require? Looking, tasting, and feeling are not very accurate indicators, but a soil test can supply the answer. A Lime Test is available at the local Agricultural Extension Office. Just bring in a soil sample from your lawn and a free test will be made.

Perhaps a word of caution should be added that overliming can also present problems. So, before you apply what you think might be the right amount, have your soil tested.

Memorable Easter Dawn Service On Hawkshill

By Mrs. Robert Field

IT WAS VERY early on Easter morning 1960. A white birch cross stood upon lonely, silent Hawkshill, mid-way between Bartonsville and Snyderderville. Not a soul was stirring in the valley below.

But by six o'clock, two hundred persons had gathered high upon this hill to commemorate the greatest miracle of all the centuries — the resurrection of Jesus Christ. In the distance the strains of "Christ Arose" could be heard.

Economy Program Underway

HARRISBURG (AP)—The Lawrence administration is pressing an economy program to meet what it estimates will be a 20-million-dollar revenue shortage at the end of the current two-year fiscal period in 1961.

Walter W. Giesey, executive secretary to Gov. Lawrence, Monday estimated the prospect of a shortage of up to 51 million dollars in appropriations.

"We're holding expenditures down, although the big spending programs are in areas where we have no control, such as relief and schools," he said in an interview.

"Actually, our only control is over about 10 per cent of the budget, mostly in general government (administration). The last time I checked, with about 37 1/2 per cent of the biennium gone by, we had spent less than that percentage of the budget."

"We have fewer employees now (60,500) at the end of February than when we had in January a year ago (71,195)."

The administration has projected a 43-million-dollar shortage in relief payments by the end of the biennium due principally, it says, to the long 1959 steel strike. It also is possible that money appropriated for public education and for workers' occupational disease benefits will fall short by a total of eight millions, Giesey said.

The executive secretary added that whatever money is needed to meet appropriation shortages will be recovered through cutbacks in other programs.

For the anticipated revenue shortage: "We hope to recover part of it by the end of the biennium."

Dr. David H. Kurtzman, Lawrence's secretary of administration, has said there may be a 20-million-dollar deficit by the end of the biennium, May 31, 1960.

The steel strike again is the reason, Kurtzman said, because it cut into expected returns from the tax on corporations' net income, capital stock and from the 4 per cent sales tax.

That estimated revenue shortage, Kurtzman said, should show up by the end of the first half of the biennium next month. Chances of recovering any of it by the end of the two-year period depend upon the national economy, Giesey and Kurtzman agreed.

Giesey explained that revenue now is running about even with the administration's estimates. An upturn in business could push returns above estimates enough to reduce the deficit by next year.

Kurtzman, however, wasn't sure there will be a significant upturn. The 1960 boom predicted when the steel strike ended hasn't materialized, he said, and economists now are "confused" as to whether there will be one.

State Treasurer Robert E. Kent, a Republican, has taken exception to the administration's estimates of a shortage, declaring it is "pure conjecture, not based on fact."
